National organizations interested in older adult mental health, and state and local coalitions on mental health and aging, are invited to join the National Coalition on Mental Health and Aging (NCMHA).

Joining NCMHA affords a number of benefits including:

- A forum for information exchange related to best practices, resources, grant opportunities, and national initiatives relevant to mental health, substance abuse and aging
- An opportunity to bring to the attention of NCMHA issues and resources from states and communities concerning the needs of older adults who experience mental health and substance abuse disorders
- A mechanism for older adult consumers to make their voice heard on mental health and substance abuse issues at the national level
- Participation in NCMHA meetings at the American Psychological Association offices in Washington DC (including participation via conference call for organizations not located in the Washington DC metropolitan area, courtesy of the National Council on Aging)
- Regular updates of NCMHA activities and issues of importance through provision of its meeting agendas and minutes, and inclusion on its electronic distribution list.

Entities interested in joining NCMHA should send a letter expressing such interest to:
